

A Comprehensive
Research Methodology Course
for Research Scholars of Social Science

18-27 February 2025

ABOUT THE COURSE:

The field of social sciences is characterized by its diverse methodologies and approaches to understanding human behaviour, societal dynamics, and complex social phenomena. Research scholars pursuing studies in social science disciplines often encounter challenges in navigating these methodologies effectively. To address this need, 'A Comprehensive Research Methodology Course for Research Scholars of Social Science' is being organised. This programme aims to equip research scholars with the necessary knowledge, skills, and tools to enhance their research methodology capabilities, thereby enabling them to conduct rigorous and impactful research in their respective fields.

The objectives of the course are as follows:

- i). To familiarize research scholars with a wide range of research methodologies and approaches relevant to social science research.
- ii). To enhance research scholars' critical thinking abilities, analytical skills, and methodological reflexivity.
- iii). To provide hands-on training in data collection, analysis, and interpretation using both qualitative and quantitative methods.
- iv). To cultivate ethical research practices and promote awareness of research integrity and academic integrity among research scholars.
- v). To facilitate networking, collaboration, and knowledge exchange among research scholars from diverse disciplinary backgrounds.

The course is structured as a comprehensive series of training sessions and practical exercises conducted over an extended period typically spanning 10 full working days. The curriculum is designed to cover a wide range of topics related to research methodology, tailored to the specific needs and interests of research scholars in social science disciplines.
