

"Everyone is a feminist when it comes to Muslim women"

a talk by
Dr. Naaz Rashid

organized by
School of Arts & Aesthetics & Centre for Women Studies, SSS, JNU

Dr. Rashid will discuss her ongoing research on the UK counter terrorism agenda focusing on how the idea of 'the Muslim woman' has been constructed in collusion with government policy narratives. She will show how this partially replicates global narratives of 'the oppressed Muslim woman' and has contributed to gendered anti-Muslim racism or 'Islamophobia' in the UK. More recently, however, Muslim women and girls are framed as being both dangerous and in danger; alongside this Muslim men are positioned as uniquely patriarchal. She will explore how these ideas play out in both mainstream and contemporary far-right populist discourses.

Date: 20th September 2019

Time: 5 p.m.

Venue: Conference Room, School of Arts and Aesthetics II