Course (MA/PhD)	: PhD
Course No.	: AW651N
Course Title	: Political Economy of Canada
Course Type (Core/Optional)	: Core
Credits	: 2 (Two)
Course Teacher	: Dr. Sneha Bhagat
Semester	: Winter Semester
Contact Hours	: 2 per week

Course Objectives

The course outlines the principal structural elements of the Canadian political economy and examines the importance of factors such as resources, social class, and International Trade. It focuses on the structure and organisation and the interrelationships between the State, Labour, and the Capital in Canada. The course also outlines the history of the domestic Political Economy and its linkages to the International Political Economy through the World Trade Organisation and NAFTA.

Learning Outcomes

At the end of the course, the students would be able to understand the dynamics of Canadian political economy. The course would also help to analyse the Canadian political economy as a way to examine Canadian state formation and Canadian economic development. The course would also help to answer some of the major questions like how Canada emerged as a major industrial capitalist country? What is the impact of neoliberalism on Canada? How has Canada experienced globalisation? How the variables of markets, power, and class have played out through Canadian economic history?
